

As I meander beyond the line that separates the predictable daily schedule and the untamed wilderness, I find that the concrete limitations from which I was previously bound aren't limitations at all, but a different means to which one would reach a goal. But today, they would not lead me to an ordinary goal. No, today I take an unknown route, an unfamiliar, nature-drawn path.

Dylan (10 th grade)